

March

“No matter how long the winter, spring is sure to follow.”

Proverb

In the News

Congratulations to Marc Kundmann on his feature in the March/April 2011 issue of Cape Cod View magazine.

Marc says, “My recent work is an exploration of painting with encaustic wax, one of the oldest forms of painting. The technique allows me to build and remove textured layers of color, transparency, and pigments. Keeping true to that first piece of advice, I try to focus on the joy of creating, and also painting with honesty. My hope is that the resulting layers create not only intriguing and beautiful surfaces, but also give emotional life to the subjects, whether figures, structures, or boats, and hint at the mystery inside.”

Encaustic, oil pastel, charcoal and shellac on birch panel

Inward Journey Marc Kundman 14 x 14 $1,450

Patience encaustic, oil pastel, charcoal and shellac on birch panel Marc Kundman 12 x 12 $1,250

Held Over: Creative Convergence

At the Addison Art Gallery

Due to the popularity of the shows, many of the works that have been part of the Creative Convergence exhibits at the Cape Cod Museum of Art and at the Addison Art Gallery, will be shown at the gallery through March.

Reception at the Cape Cod Museum of Art
Artists Jeff Bonasia, Stapleton Kearns, James Coe, Daniel Corey, Paul Schulenburg, Peter Kalill, Jerome Greene and Ian Factor

“If we had no winter, the spring would not be so pleasant; if we did not sometimes taste of adversity, prosperity would not be so welcome.”

Anne Bradstreet

On Cape Cod in March

New works continue to arrive at the gallery almost daily. Come visit us in Orleans or at addisonart.com to see the latest. Check out Cape Cod’s cultural venues for an exceptional array of exhibitions, theater and musical performances throughout the year. Lodging rates are low and the Wicked Oyster is open.

Poppies oil on linen
Cate Hunter Kashem
16 x 12, framed 24 x 20
$650

Luxury at Land’s End

March might be a great time for you to visit Provincetown’s most magnificent inn. Stay one night and get a 20% discount off each additional night through May 5th. Perks include an exquisite guest room, delightful breakfast, complimentary wine & cheese social hour, and late check-out. Visit landsendinn.com for details.